Madison Human Relations Commission plans busy 2022

BY BOB DEMAREE

After a couple of years with little activity due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the City of Madison's Human Relations Commission is working toward becoming more active in 2022.

New officers were elected at Wednesday's meeting with Jessica McAlister selected president and Katy Hadley vice president while Bill Johnson was approved to continue as the commission's secretary/treasurer.

Shane Brunner and I'Easha Cornelius were appointed in January to the commission, replacing out-going members Nathan Montoya, who had last served as chair of the commission, and Sue Livers, who had last been the vice chair.

Johnson said Mayor Bob Courtney has told the commission that he wants the group to "be creative, and possibly do some educational initiatives that might be interesting to our community and relevant."

McAlister, patron services coordinator at the Jefferson County Library, suggested the possibility of community education about LGBTQ individuals who identify as non-binary. In making the suggestion, McAlister alluded to a recent survey of Madison Consolidated High School students in which she said all of those who identify as non-binary responded that they have high rates of depression and anxiety.

STATE OF THE CITY

BY BOB DEMAREE

With a focus on moving the City of Madison forward, Mayor Bob Courtney gave his second State of City address Thursday evening.

Held last year at Madison City Hall, the event was instead presented at the Fairfield Inn and Suites in the Welch Conference Center, named after former Mayor Damon Welch, who preceded Courtney as Mayor. The move to the Fairfield Inn allowed for expanded seating and approximately 170 attended, topping last year's total at city council chambers by about 100.

"It's very special to be here tonight (in the Fairfield) because where we are sitting is a shining example of what leadership and vision is all about," Courtney said. "While Mayor Welch is not here, and could not see this project through, I'm proud to have been part of bringing his vision and leadership for this project." Courtney also praised developer Ron Bateman and all others involved in turning the former Eagle Cotton Mill building into a vibrant hotel on the riverfront.

Courtney said he was uplifted by those in attendance. "What's inspiring is the fact that we're all here tonight, and that's symbolic of the fact we are all moving Madison the same direction with the same passion," Courtney said. "It's a thrill and an honor for me to be Madison's Mayor."

He said the theme for Thursday's presentation was "really about you, and Madison on the move."

Courtney said this year's address is "much different than last year's address. Last year the pandemic caused high unemployment to our economy, took our economy over the cliff and caused human toll as many families lost loved ones. Now, we are dealing with high inflation, supply chain issues and an extremely tight labor market. While we can never dismiss the seriousness of the virus, I am proud of our city and her residents in their response. While some communities acquiesced to their circumstances, Madison was on the move. We adapted, we spent a significant amount of time planning, and saw different outcomes. We rolled up our sleeves, and went to work to move Madison forward."

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney addresses the audience during his remarks at Thursday's State of the City Address. The event, held last year before a packed house of about 70 at Madison City Hall, was presented at the Fairfield Inn & Suites by Marriott this year to provide more seating and 170 attended.

Courtney said that when he ran for Mayor, he campaigned on the theme of having a "head for business and a heart for Madison. Those words are more than a slogan," he said, by keeping promises, and seeking a Madison community that's "clean, safe, beautiful" — three words he repeats often — "It's a mission statement that drives all of our activities of the city, and all of our efforts. As your Mayor, I promised you that I would focus on improving community safety, expanding economic opportunity, and also focusing on our quality of life and place making here in our community."

COVID-19 infection rates continue to improve locally

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Although positivity rates throughout the Courier area continue to improve, local counties are still reporting COVID-19-related deaths with Jefferson County's death toll increasing by one since Wednesday and four for the week.

Jefferson County's death toll now stands at 141 but the county's current positivity rate is 11.3%

Carroll's death toll remains at 41, Trimble's at 35 and Switzerland's at 17 while Switzerland County's positivity rate 14.9%, Trimble County's 6.88% and Carroll County's 12.24%, meaning if those number hold true the county's infection metric could also be upgraded.

Ukraine's capital threatened as Russia presses invasion

BY YURAS KARMANAU, JIM HEINTZ, VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV AND DASHA LITVINOVA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KYIV, Ukraine — Russian troops bore down on Ukraine's capital Friday, with gunfire and explosions resonating ever closer to the government quarter, in an invasion of a democratic country that has fueled fears of wider war in Europe and triggered worldwide efforts to make Russia stop.

With reports of hundreds of casualties from the warfare — including shelling that sliced through a Kyiv apartment building and pummeled bridges and schools — there also were growing signs that Vladimir Putin's Russia may be seeking to overthrow Ukraine's government. It would be his boldest effort yet to redraw the world map and revive Moscow's Cold War-era influence.

In the fog of war, it was unclear how much of Ukraine remains under Ukrainian control and how much or little Russian forces have seized. The Kremlin accepted Kyiv's offer to hold talks, but it appeared to be an effort to squeeze concessions out of Ukraine's embattled president instead of a gesture toward a diplomatic solution.

The U.S. and other global powers slapped ever-tougher sanctions on Russia as the invasion reverberated through the world's economy and energy supplies, threatening to further hit ordinary households. U.N. officials said millions could flee Ukraine. Sports leagues moved to punish Russia on global playing fields. And U.S. President Joe Biden and other NATO leaders held an urgent meeting to discuss how far they can challenge Putin without engaging Russian forces in direct war.

Day 2 of Russia's invasion focused on the Ukrainian capital, where Associated Press reporters heard explosions starting before dawn and gunfire was reported in several areas.

Russia's military said it had seized a strategic airport outside Kyiv, allowing it to quickly build up forces to take the capital. It claimed to have already cut the city off from the west — the direction taken by many of those escaping the invasion, leading to lines of cars snaking toward the Polish border.

Intense gunfire broke out on a bridge across the Dneiper River dividing eastern and western Kyiv, with about 200 Ukrainian forces taking defensive positions and sheltering behind their armored vehicles and under the bridge. Another key bridge leading to the capital was blown away, with smoke rising from it.

Ukrainian officials reported at least 137 deaths on their side and claimed hundreds on the Russian one. Russian authorities released no casualty figures, and it was not possible to verify the tolls.

U.N. officials reported 25 civilian deaths, mostly from shelling and airstrikes, and said that 100,000 people were believed to have left their homes, estimating up to 4 million could flee if the fighting escalates.

Goodin named USDA Rural Development state director

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Former Indiana State Rep. and house Minority Leader Terry Goodin has been appointed by President Joe Biden to a U.S. Department of Agriculture leadership position the USDA announced Thursday.

Goodin was among 11 appointed by Biden to USDA regional positions, including three Farm Service Agency (FSA) State Executive Directors and eight Rural Development (RD) State Directors.

A lifelong Hoosier, Goodin grew up raising beef cattle on the family farm which he continues to operate today. The position for Goodin was appointed is Rural Development State Director for Indiana.

Terry Goodin

Most recently, Goodin, 55, of Austin, served 24 years as superintendent of Crothersville Community Schools. However, he also served and represented Jefferson and Scott counties in the Indiana House of Representatives for 20 years, including one year as the House Minority Leader. He served on the State Budget Committee and as the Vice-Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and was a member of the Agriculture and Rural Development, Natural Resources, Roads and Transportation, International Trade, Banking and Finance, and Elections and Apportionment Committees.

RD State Directors serve as the chief executive officer of Rural Development in the states and territories and are tasked with carrying out the mission of Rural Development to the benefit of everyone in rural America. In conjunction with the guidance and support of the National Office, State Directors are responsible for promoting the mission and strategic goals of Rural Development and provide key leadership to develop and support a productive, diverse, and inclusive state workforce.

FSA State Executive Directors oversee Farm Service Agency operations and agricultural policy implementation in the state. Each State Executive Director works with the State Committee to administer FSA programs and County office operations, develops and maintains stakeholder relationships with customers and other agencies and governments.

Goodin is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University where he received his Bachelor of Arts in 1989 and Master of Arts in History and Secondary Education in 1990. In 1995, he received his Doctorate from Indiana University Bloomington. He has also served as a teacher and principal in the Austin and Bloomington South school systems.

Hanover Police arrest Clark County man

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A Tuesday traffic stop by Hanover Police led to the arrest of a Clark County man on narcotics charges,

Bradley James Stutesman, 37, Charlestown, was charged with Possession of Firearm by Serious Violent Felon and Possession of Methamphetamine, both Level 4 felonies; and two counts of Possession of Syringe, both Level 6 felonies.

He was lodged in the Jefferson County Jail without bond.

Elsewhere, a vehicle pursuit that began in Gallatin County and ended in Owen County on Thursday resulted in the arrest of a Grant County man on numerous felony charges,

Bradley Stutesman

Michael Lepper

During an attempted traffic stop by the Gallatin County Sheriff's Office, Michael Lepper, 31, Walton, Kentucky, refused to stop, which led to a pursuit and Kentucky State Police Post 5 were contacted to assist.

During that pursuit an individual was injured when Lepper's vehicle struck a civilian's vehicle and the injured person had to be transported to the University of Kentucky Hospital by Air Methods helicopter.

Lepper was charge with leaving the scene of an accident, attempted murder of a police officer, first-degree assault on a police officer, reckless driving, wanton endangerment-second degree, first-degree assault, speeding, operating on a suspended license and parole violation. He was lodged in the Carroll County Regional Detention Center in Carrollton, without bail.

Kentucky State Police were assisted on the scene by Owen County Sheriff's Office, Owenton Police Department, Owen County EMS, Air Methods, Owenton Fire Department, Owen County Fire Department, Jonesville Fire Department and Owen County Search and Rescue.

BUSY

"A lot of the teachers don't know what do with this information" to help those students feel better or more comfortable, McAlister noted

Hadley, a Hanover College sociology professor, said, "It's really heartening to know that people want to learn more about how to support and how to recognize people's identities for who they are. I love that, but I'm sad to hear how those kids are feeling (at the high school), but that's also similar with students (identifying that way) at Hanover College."

Johnson, pastor at Madison's First Christian Church, said the issue is "relevant, but I don't know how to tackle it, but more educational is always helpful."

No actual plans for developing educational activities were made but the group said possibility remains for that to be considered in the future.

Among other business for the commission is work on updating the city's fair housing policies ordinance to bring it into compliance with state and federal regulations. However, board members expressed confusion about knowing exactly how they need to go about that. McAlister and Hadley agreed to be part of a sub-committee to work toward reviewing the fair housing ordinance.

Johnson expressed the need to have a representative of the city to regularly attend the human relation commissions meetings to provide assistance and direction, and to provide a liaison to city officials.

"We need that bridge between the Mayor's office," said Newman.

STATE

Finnegan has served as director of the Jefferson County Court Services since 2010, with her last day in that position being March 4. The position of State Director of Correctional Education is part of Ivy Tech's educational partnership with the Indiana Department of Correction (IDOC). As state director, Finnegan will oversee Ivy Tech's IDOC contracts, provide leadership for educational programs, research and develop new program possibilities and support students' re-entry aspirations.

Ivy Tech has a four-year contract to provide adult education services that began July 1 and a three-year contract to provide vocational programs that began Jan. 1. Through these contracts, Ivy Tech will serve at least 3,500 incarcerated students annually, providing opportunities for the students to improve their educational skills, earn high school equivalency diplomas or earn job skills and a nationally recognized, short-term certification in a high-demand industry.

The services delivered, managed out of the Ivy Tech Madison campus, will be aligned to the guidelines and requirements of the Indiana Department of Education and the Indiana Department of Workforce Development.

"I feel honored to be selected for this position with Ivy Tech," said Finnegan. "I have been very blessed over the past 12 years with a great team who has helped me develop a comprehensive evidence-based agency that serves justice-involved individuals from arrest to release from prison. The current criminal justice stakeholders are committed to making this community a safe place to live, and I will always be grateful for their partnership and leadership. I am looking forward to this opportunity to serve our community and the state of Indiana in this new capacity."

Finnegan holds a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis. She also spent 10 years as a probation officer in the Bartholomew County Court Services before joining Jefferson County Court Services. In 2021, Finnegan was elected as president of the Indiana Association of Community Correction Act Counties (IACCAC) in which she received the Presidents Award in 2011 and has been a member since 2003. She also volunteers as a member of the Healthy Communities Substance Abuse Committee at Nortons King's Daughters' Health and on the executive board of Resilience Jefferson County.

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Switzerland County spent 29 minutes chasing down Madison and once they caught the Cubs the Pacers weren't letting go.

Switzerland took its first lead of the game on a Bryce Wrightsman basket with less than three minutes to play and never trailed again, holding on for a 53-49 win in the boys basketball season finale for both teams Thursday in Vevay.

The win gives Switzerland County 10 victories in a season for the time since the 2016-17 campaign — also the last time the Pacers defeated Madison — and sends them into the sectional tournament on a high.

"We had chased them and chased them and to be able to finally close it out was huge for our guys," Switzerland coach Travis Wrightsman said. "We had a pretty good crowd and this was a sectional-type environment and to go on a two-game win streak right here at the end of the season hopefully gives us some momentum going into next week."

Other than a 7-0 start by Madison, the game was tight throughout. After the Pacers answered the Cubs' opening salvo with five-straight points, Switzerland trailed by more than four only one other time, and then only briefly.

Madison (6-17) led 30-25 at halftime and pushed its margin to seven with a Jackson Falconberry basket moments into the third quarter. Cole Riley answered with a 3-pointer for Switzerland County and once again, the two teams were locked in a tight struggle.

Switzerland County (10-13) tied the game three different times before finally getting over the hump on Bryce Wrightsman's two free throws with 2:41 to play. After Madison missed a shot. Riley scored on an inside bucket to push the Pacer lead to four (50-46) with 1:43 to go.

Then it was Madison's turn to rally. Henry Grote hit a free throw on the other end to pull the Cubs to within three and after a Switzerland turnover, Falconberry scored on a runout to close the gap to one with 1:16 to go.

Switzerland opened the door for Madison to re-take the lead after Canaan Johnson missed two free throws, but Ben Hicks made up for the mistake by getting a steal. The Pacers then ran off 26 seconds before the Cubs fouled and sent Wrightsman to the line with 18 seconds to go. The senior calmly sank both free throws to put the Pacers up 52-49. Grote missed a 3-pointer on the other end with 11 seconds to go and Riley hit one free throw for the Pacers to seal the win.

"We have some older guys but we don't have a lot of guys that have played a lot of basketball and I don't think we have the the leadership yet to close out that kind of game," Stotts said. "Down the stretch, I just I felt like we got lost on defense. I told them it was going to come down to defense and we got lost a couple times offensively. We weren't really sharp with the ball. We didn't execute our stuff. So I think really defensively is where it kind of kind of fell apart."

Falconberry had 15 points and 10 rebounds to lead Madison while Grote had 15 points and five rebounds. Quincey Reynolds added seven points and Adam Traylor scored six.

Cam Craig shrugged off an illness to score 15 points to lead Switzerland County while Wrightsman had 11 points and Riley scored 10.

On Wednesday, Switzerland took control in the third quarter to beat New Washington 60-46 at home.

The Pacers led only 23-22 at the half but outscored New Washington 21-10 in the third period to open up a 44-32 lead. Switzerland then closed out the win in the fourth.

Hicks scored 16 points to lead Switzerland while Craig had 14 points and 10 rebounds. Aiden Griffith added 10 points for the Pacers.

Both teams now look ahead to sectional play where each will begin their respective tournaments in the opening round. Switzerland will take on Austin in the opening round of the Class 2A Sectional at Southwestern on Tuesday while Madison will face Scottsburg in the 3A opener at Salem on Wednesday.

"Austin doesn't don't have a lot of wins but they play a really tough schedule with their conference that they're in. They are similar to Madison where they don't have a lot of size but they've got some good guards that can spread you out," Coach Wrightsman said. "So it's it's definitely going to be a good challenge for us. And I think we've got the momentum going in and we're ready."

"We've shown lately that we can start to score the ball. We just haven't put together a game on both ends or I felt comfortable that we executed as best we could offensively and defensively," Stotts said. "We have to guard Scottsburg. They've scored over 60 in the last couple of games, so I want to hold them under 60 and then execute our stuff ... I'm looking forward to it. I hope our guys come out ready these next couple practices."

Hopkins helps No. 6 Kentucky rally, then survive LSU 71-66

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — Having seen his fellow Kentucky reserves shine when given the opportunity prepared Bryce Hopkins for his chance to make a difference.

Hopkins came off the bench to score a career-high 13 points, including 11 to fuel Kentucky's 15-2 second-half surge, and Oscar Tshiebwe and Keion Brooks Jr. made late free throws to help the No. 6 Wildcats survive LSU 71-66 on Wednesday night.

The short-handed Wildcats trailed 36-28 just after halftime and needed offense besides Tshiebwe. Hopkins, a 6-foot-6 freshman forward, provided an immediate spark by muscling for baskets and drawing chances at the foul line during the spurt. His three-point play put up Kentucky ahead up 39-36 with 15:35 left and came seconds after Tshiebwe grabbed Hopkins' missed free throw and created two chances ending with Hopkins' tip-in.

Hopkins was 5 of 6 from the field and had four rebounds in 16 minutes, just enough to give Kentucky a much-needed boost.

"I saw in the first half that we were kind of like playing a little slow," said Hopkins, who hadn't played more than four minutes since Jan. 15 and was averaging just a basket a game.

In the second half Coach (John Calipari) was saying we needed a little energy, so that's what I tried to do when I came into the game. Just started to bring energy, and just contribute."

Calipari added, "All I have been talking about is preparing for an opportunity. ... You can listen to everybody tell you it is everybody else or the coach, or you can say when I get my chance, I am going to do what the team needs me to do."

Hopkins' jumper made it 43-38 and Kentucky (23-5, 12-3 Southeastern Conference) built a 65-50 lead late before LSU rallied to 68-64 with 33.2 seconds left. Brooks made two free throws with 20 seconds later, and Tshiebwe answered Darius Days' layup by making a free throw with 3.1 seconds left to seal Kentucky's second consecutive victory.

Xavier Pinson had a season-high 26 points for the Tigers (19-9, 7-8) in their second straight loss after three straight wins. Eric Gaines added 11 points and Days 10 with eight rebounds.

Tshiebwe finished with 17 points and 16 rebounds for Kentucky, which played its second consecutive contest without injured starting guards TyTy Washington Jr. and Sahvir Wheeler.

Shawe drops regular-season finale at Rising Sun 65-32

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Rising Sun jumped on Shawe from the start and rolled to a 65-32 win in boys basketball on Wednesday evening at Rising Sun.

The host Shiners led 19-9 after the first quarter and never looked back, taking a 37-21 at the half and blowing open the game with a 25-1 third-quarter run before coasting in from there.

Sophomore Philip Kahn led the Hilltoppers with 10 points.

Jacob Hertz scored nine points, Jack Grote had seven and Eric Liu chipped in three points.

Damon Carrigan scored 21 points and Peyton Merica scored 11 points.

Shawe wraps up the regular season with an 8-12 overall record and 0-6 in the Ohio River Valley Conference.

The Hilltoppers open up the Class 1A Sectional at Edinburgh on Tuesday evening.

That's when they'll have a matchup against West Washington in the opening round of postseason play.

31ST DISTRICT TOURNAMENT

Photos by David Campbell

Carroll County coach Hannah Devine (in middle) and the bench react after a big basket late in the Panthers' loss to Henry County in the 31st District Tournament on Wednesday.

Carroll rally falls short in 51-46 loss to Henry

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

OWENTON — Carroll County nearly overcame a fatal scoring drought but couldn't close out the game in the end, falling 51-46 to Henry County in the semifinals of the KHSAA 31st District Tournament at Owen County on Wednesday.

The Panthers jumped out to a huge 11-2 lead less than three minutes into the game but then managed just four points over the next 15 minutes of game time. Still, Carroll found itself locked in tie game with four minutes left in regulation.

But Henry County made just enough free throws down the stretch to hold off the Panther comeback and end Carroll's season.

"That's been the name of our game this year. We have a flat spell for a long time," Carroll coach Hannah Devine said. "(But) our girls didn't give up today. There's nothing to be ashamed of and they did exactly what we asked him to do. It just came down to we didn't make shots."

Carroll looked like it would be unstoppable in the game's first three minutes. Courtney Strickland bombed a 3-pointer right out of the gate, Reagan Matthews connected on a three-point play a minute later, Madie Hicks drilled her own 3-pointer and Katie McAlister scored a bucket as the Panthers opened up an 11-2 lead.

That huge start proved to be crucial. Carroll didn't score again until Hicks' basket with 3:39 left in the second quarter and Matthews' basket at the buzzer proved to be the Panthers' only other points of the first half. But Henry led only 23-15 at the half and, despite that drought, Carroll was still in the game.

Carroll County's Reagan Matthews (32) passes around Henry County's Ashlyn Tingle (55) during the 31st District Tournament on Wednesday.

The Panthers rediscovered their offense in the nick of time. After Mary Golden hit a 3-pointer to open the third quarter for Henry and put the Ladycats up 26-15, Carroll ripped off a 10-0 run that pulled the Panthers to within one at 26-25. Moments later, Hicks tied the game with a basket and Carroll eventually took a brief 30-29 lead on a Strickland free throw with 18 seconds left in the quarter.

Henry County (13-14) re-took the lead on an Ashlyn Tingle basket just before the quarter break and Rylii Hunt drilled a 3-pointer at the start of the fourth to put the Cats back on top, 34-30.

Carroll answered once again, getting baskets from Grace Perkins and Bailee Matthews to tie the game and a Hicks free throw to go up 35-34. After Hunt scored a basket and Perkins hit a free throw, the game was tied 36-36 with 4:36 to play.

Hunt hit a tough runner in the lane to put Henry back on top and while the Ladycats didn't trail again, it was still a close game until the end. Henry eventually went ahead 47-40 on a Hunt basket with 55 seconds to go, but baskets by Bailee Matthews and Hicks pulled the Panthers to within 48-44 with 18 seconds left.

After Henry missed two free throws, Strickland was fouled on a 3-point attempt with 7.5 seconds left. She hit only two of the shots to pull Carroll to within two and Tingle was fouled on the rebound. The Henry junior hit the first shot, then rebounded her own miss on the second and put in the rebound as time expired for the final margin.

Tingle dominated the paint all night and finished with 17 points to lead Henry County while Hunt and Golden scored 11 points each.

Hicks led Carroll with 17 points and Strickland scored 11 points.

Henry advanced to the district championship on Friday where it took on Owen County. Both teams will advance to the Eighth Region Tournament at Grant County next week.

Carroll ends the season with an 11-18 record but graduates only one senior, Bailee Matthews, and Devine is encouraged about the future.

"I think I think the future is pretty bright. We've got one senior and the rest are juniors and I think our JV team has really come along this year," Devine said. "So there's a lot to look forward to."

Indiana men end five-game losing streak

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOOMINGTON — Xavier Johnson scored 20 of his 24 points in the second half when Indiana pulled away from Maryland to win 74-64 on Thursday night and end a five-game losing streak.

Race Thompson added 19 points, 12 in the second half, and had a game-high nine rebounds. Johnson had six assists. Trayce Jackson-Davis added 10 points, eight shy of his average, for the Hoosiers (17-10, 8-9 Big Ten), who some considered an NCAA Tournament bubble team coming into the game. Fatts Russell scored 23 points, making 5 of 9 3-point tries, Hakim Hart added 14 points and Donta Scott 10 for the Terrapins (13-15, 5-12), who had a two-game win streak snapped.

Except for a 30-all tie after Hart hit a 3-pointer to open the second half, Indiana led the entire way. Leading by three midway through the second half, Johnson hit a 3-pointer and seven minutes later the Hoosiers were ahead by 15 after a Jackson-Davis dunk.

Hanover baseball opens season with 9-1 loss at Centre

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Centre scored seven runs over the first two innings and rolled to a 9-1 win at home to spoil Hanover's 2022 baseball season opener on Wednesday in Danville, Kentucky.

The Colonels scored four runs, all with two outs, in the bottom of the first to take a 4-0 lead then added three more runs in the second to go ahead 7-0.

Hanover scored its only run of the game in the fourth with Andrew Littlefield opened the inning with a double and Alex Christie drove him in with a single to right. But a double play ended the Panther threat.

Centre (3-1) added solo runs in the fourth and fifth innings for the final margin.

Freshman Sam Perkins had two hits in his collegiate debut to lead Hanover while Charlie Burton, Connor Farnsley and Jake Danneman each had hits.

Wyatt Prather (0-1) started and took the loss for the Panthers after allowing six earned runs on five hits in two innings with three strikeouts and four walks.

Hanover, now 0-1 on the season, heads to Maryville, Tennessee, for a three-game series this weekend, starting with a doubleheader on Saturday. The two teams will play a solo game on Sunday. The Panthers then leave for a week of games in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, starting on Tuesday.

BY ALAN SAUNDERS
ASSOCIATE PRESS

PITTSBURGH — The first half did not go according to plan for No. 4 Louisville at Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals knew Pitt would be aggressive on the glass and try to outwork Louisville in the paint to make up for its poor shooting. Knowing about that plan ahead of time didn't stop it from nearly working. The Panthers kept the the Cardinals' offense in check throughout the first half on Thursday night and twice tied the game in the third quarter before Louisville pulled away for a 66-55 win.

Emily Engstler had 17 points and 15 rebounds for the Cardinals (24-3, 15-2 Atlantic Coast Conference), who have won two in a row since losing last week at then-No. 24 North Carolina. The Cardinals weren't happy they allowed Pitt (11-17, 2-15) to hang around.

"The game shouldn't have been as close as it was," senior forward Liz Dixon said. "We knew that they were going to be a rebounding team. The goal was to rebound and not foul. We were not handling business at all."

Greedy boss tests our boundaries

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My boss is simply a taker, and I'm tired of it. I am a pretty generous person, but I feel like she takes advantage. She has no problem asking to use or have others' personal items.

When she first came to my office, she asked if she could use my coffee creamer. I thought nothing of it and, of course, said yes. She has since made my coffee creamer our coffee creamer. Even though she occasionally hands me $5, she uses much more than that, and I never signed up to have communal creamer or be the person sent to the store to get it on my time every week.

She has asked to use my and others' phone chargers. She takes from people's candy dishes, which we all do, but we refill them, and we have our own to offer one another. Beyond just eating other's Life Savers, she uses her finger to fish around to find the flavor she likes. She uses tea bags and honey. If she sees someone eating cheese crackers, she has no problem asking for some.

She is the boss and makes more than all of us. These items are not free, and they aren't just dropped on our desks. We have to go buy them. How do we put an end to the greed but not make things awkward? Thank you in advance for your advice. — Frustrated With Freeloader

Dear Frustrated: Take a page out of your boss' book and be direct. Start with the kitchen: Ask her if the company can cover the expense for and order things that most everyone uses, like ground coffee, creamer, utensils and other treats that she and your coworkers enjoy.

Confrontation and saying no can feel difficult and uncomfortable, but you don't have to do it rudely. Lean into speaking up; you'll never establish healthy professional boundaries if you don't.

Dear Annie: I have been married for almost 18 years. I will be the first to tell you that I am not an easy person to live with. I had a child before my husband and I got married, which he knew and said wouldn't be a problem. This is his second marriage. I have some health issues that I manage with medicine.

We have a child together, yet he pretty much ignores my older child. He does what his family wants. If we have plans and a family member calls, our kids and I are thrown aside. He puts my older child down to our child and says taking the eldest places is inconvenient for him, throwing it off on me.

The kids and I are to the point where we don't say much to him because he gets mad, pouts and/or says that he's not going to say anything else because he always gets in trouble. I have caught him in lies, yet there are times that he talks to me like I am totally stupid, and he bullies and intimidates our kids as a form of "punishment."

I told him that I was done and don't care anymore. He also threatens/intimidates the youngest they BETTER NOT tell their mama (me) what he said. This is beginning to affect my health more and more. — Feeling Stuck

Dear Stuck: The best way to show someone like your husband that you mean business is to follow through on taking action. Every day that the three of you continue to be exposed to his manipulation and emotional abuse does more and more damage. Your health is suffering, and so is your kids' mental health.

Your husband is greatly flawed as a partner to you and as a father. Pursue family therapy and counseling to help the kids work through their individual trauma.

My almost-perfect husband gives me no affection

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been together for 10 years. We found each other when we needed each other the most. I fell head over heels in love with him and am still just as much in love with him a decade later.

Four months after we met, he asked me to marry him, and two months after that, we found out we were pregnant. We both were in our late 30s. I had two children from a previous marriage living at home with me. He stepped right into the daddy role and has done the absolute best job possible. My oldest has now made us grandparents. My husband is the best papaw our grandson could have ever asked for.

He is an amazing person, and I know he loves me with all his heart, but since I had gotten pregnant with our child, he has not been very affectionate toward me. In the past six years, his health has declined, and we've both gained weight. I have talked to him about this. His answer is, "It's just the way I am." He kisses me good morning and good night, and he sends me text messages throughout the day telling me that he loves me.

My husband is attentive and caring when I'm sick or hurt. We hold hands; we chat and talk like always, but if I want anything more than that, I have to initiate it and face the possibility of rejection.

Being rejected by the love of my life just destroys me. We went from crazed-acting teenagers to not having relations for months on end. I know my body has changed, and so has his. I've begged him to see someone — maybe it's something medical and can be treated — but he refuses. He says the fact that he is not interested in having sex with me hurts him just as much as it does me.

I have tried to be understanding and loving about this, but it's getting harder. I'm also scared to death imagining that I will never again feel the touch or passion of a man.

Leaving him would devastate my whole family and me. Not one single time have I ever considered cheating on him — until lately. I'm craving the attention and the intimacy. I know I could go elsewhere and get my physical needs met, but cheating is something I've always sworn I would never do. Lately, I've been thinking about it more and more. Thank you for listening to me, and I'd love some advice. — Missing My Husband

Dear Missing My Husband: Cheating will only complicate things by bringing another person into your otherwise wonderful marriage. It's time for the two of you to seek professional marriage counseling. What comes through in your letter is the picture of a couple that is very much in love with each other and mutually respects each other but is just stuck in a rut. The best way to get out of a rut is to figure out why you are in this and, with the help of a professional, get out of the rut. In addition, I would get both of you checked out by a doctor and make sure that there is nothing wrong physically with either of you.

MLB nears deadline to cancel games, shorten season

BY RONALD BLUM
AP BASEBALL WRITER

JUPITER, Fla. — Another negotiating session produced only minor movement and no proposals on big-money issues, leaving Major League Baseball four days from management's Monday night deadline for a deal to salvage opening day and a 162-game season.

Both sides appeared Thursday to be in a you-make-the-next-move staredown on central economic issues of the lockout, such as luxury tax thresholds and rates, the minimum salary and the proposed bonus pool for pre-arbitration players.

Given those stances, it appeared the earliest movement on the main issues would be in the hours before management says it will carry through on its threat to start canceling games and costing players salary.

The union came away with the impression that management said it was out of ideas until players offer new proposals on key issues. Clubs say the union hasn't altered its luxury tax plan since November, and players say they are waiting because management told the union luxury tax usually is among the last items addressed.

Players also want to reduce revenue sharing and expand salary arbitration eligibility, and teams say they will not agree to either proposal.

Both sides agreed to meet again Friday, the fifth straight day of bargaining and the 11th on core economics since the lockout started Dec. 2.

Baseball's ninth work stoppage, its first since 1995, enters its 86th day Friday.

Players have not accepted Monday as a deadline and have suggested any missed games could be made up as part of doubleheaders, a method MLB said it will not agree to.

The union told MLB if games are missed and salaries are lost, clubs should not expect players to agree to management's proposals to expand the postseason and to allow advertisements on uniforms and helmets.

Baseball commissioner Rob Manfred has not publicly commented on the talks since Feb. 10 and union head Tony Clark since Dec. 2.

Players modified part of their formula for additional service time for top young players, covering the top 15 in each league by WAR among starting pitchers, relief pitchers and outfielders, down from 20, and the top five at other positions, down from seven.

The union says such a mechanism is needed to prevent teams from holding players in the minor leagues to delay free agency, such as the union claimed in an unsuccessful grievance against the Chicago Cubs over Kris Bryant that was decided by an arbitrator two years ago. Teams say they won't agree to such a proposal.

The union also tweaked its complex plan for a lottery to decide the top seven amateur draft picks to prevent a team that pays revenue sharing from picking among the top nine if it finished among the lowest eight winning percentages in each of the two previous seasons or the bottom 12 in each of the previous three. That provision would start in 2024.

A club paying revenue sharing that finishes among the bottom 12 in winning percentage in each of the previous four or more seasons would have its pick dropped to 18th along with any team receiving revenue sharing that finishes among the bottom eight in the three previous seasons. The draft lottery would assign a 15% chance of picking first to each of the three teams with the lowest winning percentages, 12.5% for fourth-lowest, decreasing to 10% for fifth-lowest, 8% for sixth-lowest, 6.5% for seventh-lowest and 5% for eighth-lowest.

New York Yankees owner Hal Steinbrenner, Houston pitcher Lance McCullers Jr. and Miami infielder Miguel Rojas joined negotiations at Roger Dean Stadium, the idle spring training home of the Marlins and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Players who remained from earlier in the week included the Yankees' Gerrit Cole and Jameson Taillon, the Mets' Max Scherzer and Francisco Lindor, the Cardinals' Paul Goldschmidt, the Chicago Cubs' Ian Happ, the Brewers' Brent Suter and free agent Andrew Miller.

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — When Rick Carlisle started job hunting last summer, Indiana quickly emerged as a favored destination.

The Pacers had an experienced roster, playoff aspirations and a hungry group eager to fulfill its full potential.

Eight months later, a rash of injuries, COVID-19 absences, and a flurry of trade-deadline moves changed the plan. Expectations were lowered dramatically with a suddenly fresh-faced team hovering near the bottom of the Eastern Conference standings and trying to rebuild on the fly.

It's forcing everyone to embark on a new journey..

"You kind of scale down the menu of things you're doing offensively. You get to the core of what's most important and you kind of rebuild based on personnel," Carlisle said. "It's been a little bit of a whirlwind for these guys, but it's a great opportunity for them and for us."

Coaches who stick around the league for two decades, like Carlisle, have been down this course multiple times. They've endured the midseason swaps, the changing philosophies, the mixing and matching of rotations as each game becomes a new audition — and survived..

Since the early 1990s. Indiana's decision-makers — Donnie Walsh, Larry Bird and president of basketball operations Kevin Pritchard — largely kept the cornerstones in place and tinkered around the edges to stay competitive.

But multiple injury-riddled seasons, a franchise-record nine straight playoff losses, no playoff series victories since 2013-14 and the likelihood of a second straight postseason absence convinced Pritchard to pull the plug. Sagging attendance and the possibility of a second straight losing season at home only expedited it.

So Pritchard sent two-time All-Star Domantas Sabonis to Sacramento and starting guard Caris LeVert to Cleveland. Guards Justin Holiday and Jeremy Lamb and forward Torrey Craig also were dealt away.

They've been replaced in the rotation by 3-point specialist Buddy Hield and two recent first-round draft picks, forward Jalen Smith and an emerging star in 21-year-old point guard Tyrese Haliburton.

"I think there's a journey starting here, a journey with some younger players, a journey with some existing players, but I do feel the best I've felt in a long time about the direction of this team," Pritchard said after also adding two potential top-40 draft picks. "We have the point guard of our future and if you've been in this business for a long time, you know getting a point guard who is young with upside who you feel like you can build around for the next 10 years, those don't come around very often. We feel like Tyrese is that guy.""

Trying to piece it together over this final 22-game run won't be easy. It begins Friday against Oklahoma City.

Pacers fans got a brief preview of coming attractions before the All-Star break, but with eight days between games, Carlisle, his staff and players have had time to map out a new strategy.

How exactly the Pacers intend to play it remains uncertain.

Carlisle remains hopeful that veterans Malcolm Brogdon and two-time blocks champion Myles Turner will return from injuries soon. Brogdon has missed 27 of the past 30 games with a sore right Achilles tendon and made his last appearance Jan. 19, though he told reporters he expects to play Friday. Turner, meanwhile, has been out since Jan. 14 because of a stress reaction in his left foot.

While Smith and Hield have been solid since arriving two weeks ago, Haliburton has become the feature attraction. Despite practicing sparsely with his new teammates, he averaged 20.8 points and 11.0 assists in his first four games — before leaving the All-Star weekend festivities so he could retrieve his clothes from Sacramento. It didn't deter his focal point.

"I've gotten more unsolicited messages about this kid as an amazing person, an amazing player, how joyful he is — it's been a little bit overwhelming," Carlisle said. "He's a pass-first guy that's always looking to involve all of his teammates and yet he finds a way to get the ball in the basket. He's a special young player."

Brogdon and Turner will have to adapt, too. They'll need to work their way into game shape, learn the nuances of their new teammates, and get reacquainted with an offense designed to run through Haliburton.

It won't be easy and it might not be pretty as Carlisle pieces the Pacers back together with an eye toward making a playoff run in 2022-23. But it will give the Pacers two months to recast their future plans — and find a new landing spot with a revamped roster.

"The whole week's been crazy, but what can you do?" Haliburton said before leaving town. "You've just got to go out there and hoop."

Aikman expected to join ESPN

BY JOE REEDY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NFL free agency doesn't begin for a few more weeks, however business is about to pick up when it comes to shuffling among the network broadcast teams with perhaps the biggest surprise of them all.

Troy Aikman is expected to become the lead analyst on ESPN's "Monday Night Football" after 22 years with Fox. The New York Post reported that Aikman will sign a five-year deal that would rival the $17.5 million per year Tony Romo is making at CBS.

Aikman has been with Joe Buck on Fox's top crew since 2002, but there have been rumblings the past couple of months that the Hall of Fame quarterback had been looking to move on.

Many thought that Aikman would join Al Michaels at Amazon, which takes over "Thursday Night Football" next season. Instead, it is ESPN, which has its star quarterback after falling short with Romo and Peyton Manning in recent seasons.

ESPN chairman Jimmy Pitaro had tried to get Manning for years to join the "Monday Night Football" booth since he retired after the 2015 season. Pitaro's patience paid off last year when the Manningcast with Peyton and Eli Manning debuted to rave reviews. The 10-game "Monday Night Football with Peyton and Eli" package runs through 2024.

Steve Levy, Brian Griese and Louis Riddick have done the main broadcast the past two seasons. Michaels could take another look at ESPN now that it has Aikman.

Michaels was in line to be the play-by-play announcer when the "Monday Night" package moved from ABC to ESPN in 2006. He was traded to NBC after he expressed interest in remaining with John Madden, producer Fred Gaudelli and director Drew Esocoff after they elected to go to "Sunday Night Football."

The MNF booth has had frequent changes since Mike Tirico left for NBC in 2016. Tirico was the play-by-play voice for 10 seasons (2006-15) and teamed with Jon Gruden for the last seven. Sean McDonough took over for Tirico for 2016 and '17 and worked with Gruden.

Fox could bump Greg Olsen up to the top team or it could make a run at former New Orleans Saints coach Sean Payton.

Tips to lowering your property taxes

"One thing that you can always count on, death and taxes."

Steve Dybwad

Layin It On The Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

When you own a home, you are liable for the property taxes assessed on your property. The taxes collected on your property pay your share of the cost of local schools, government, and several other local and other programs. The biggest mistake many homeowners make is overpaying these taxes. You have rights and have the opportunity only to pay your fair share of the taxes assessed. You have options available to you to make sure the assessment on your home is fair. However, you do not have to overpay to be honoring your civic duty by paying taxes. There are several things that can be done to lower your taxes and help keep the cost of owning a home down.

Fair Assessment:

The most important thing is a fair and accurate assessment of the value of your home. Each year (or every 3 years), the county tax assessor will evaluate the value of your home and any new improvements made to it. The tax assessor will also take into consideration the "fair market value" of any homes sold (also known as comparables) in your area and the replacement cost of your home. Once the tax assessor determines your property value, the liability can be established. Schools, municipal areas, county, and special tax districts determine your actual taxes. The assessments from the taxing districts cannot be contested. The tax assessor has leeway and discretion in evaluating each piece of property. The evaluation should be fair, and you have the right to complain and argue with this valuation. If you can successfully argue a lower valuation, your tax liability will be lower.

The easiest way to lower the evaluation is to discuss with the person who determines your home value Information you can provide regarding similar home valuations in your area will all help you make your point of the argument. Most tax assessors will allow you to discuss the evaluation of your home and generally will negotiate these values when a factual statement is made.

Tax Exemptions:

Many states allow for the filing of a Homestead Exemption Act to lower the value of your home. This filing protects the allowable state limit of the Homestead Act and will reduce the value of your home by that amount. The reduction in the value of your home will lower the tax overall tax liability of your property taxes.

Many counties in this country allow for a senior citizen's tax exemption. This exemption is based on the overall income of the occupant of the home. Each state or county will have its own rules and exemptions, so your local county tax assessor should be contacted.

Mortgage Insurance:

Many FHA-guaranteed loans require an insurance payment based on the age of the loan and the value of the loan. Often the amount charged is too high and can be reduced at certain periods; this insurance is no longer needed, and it can be removed. Contact your local mortgage service company for specific details.

The most important thing to remember is that you have rights, and you can argue for those rights. Most homeowners who ask for a re-assessment of their home value will receive a benefit adjustment.

Always pay your fair share which means never pay more than you owe, may sure your tax liability is accurate.

CITY

In terms of public safety, Courtney said the initiatives are "changing the landscape here in Madison."

Under the leadership of Police Chief John Wallace, Courtney said the recommendations were implemented of a diversified, citizen-led public safety steering committee that revised 13 standard operating procedures and "brought integrity that was lacking in the evidence handling process. We implemented the use of new technology all across the community to catch the bad guys." Additionally, he said that with the unanimous support of City Council, the number of full-time police officers was increased by 10% and added additional capacity with a five fully trained and licensed part-time officers to "add much needed resources," along with more traffic management and resources to better fight drug crime.

"In the last two years, narcotic arrests are up double digits, and our crime is down by a like amount," Courtney said. "There is no more important investment we can make than in keeping our community safe. That is the foundation of everything that we want to accomplish."

Courtney also praised Madison's "rich history of an all-volunteer fire protection service" that he said responded last year to more than 550 emergencies including 50 fires, and logged more than 2,000 hours of training. He praised the work last year on June 18 — the night of flash flooding in Madison — when "our brave officers, firemen and first responders performed water rescues through the night, saving 35 people from their homes ... thanks to their heroic efforts there was no loss of life. Whether it's structure fires, search and rescue or dealing with hazardous materials, or simply installing free smoke detectors or carbon monoxide detectors, they always answer the call for help."

Courtney cited the "importance of how people move around in our community, and we've invested in improving our streets and sidewalks both downtown and on the hilltop" with a focus on improving the overall experience of residents and visitors. He said last year a comprehensive plan was developed for the city's sidewalks while in the last year investing in sidewalk repair, and creating new sidewalks. He noted that in 2023 there will be new sidewalks installed on Clifty Drive and an additional $1.5 million investment in the Oak Hill subdivision will bring new roads and sidewalks to that neighborhood this summer.

Courtney said after the city acquired State Road 56 west of Madison "we re-imagined the potential impact of that street, upgraded the condition of the road, changed the traffic pattern at a calming effect, and reduced the instances of traffic accidents." He said the city has also secured a $5 million grant "on our way to a $20 million, multi-year reinvestment complementing our destination maps and strategies."

With regard to economic development, Courtney said, "We are relentless in our efforts to drive investment to Madison. Together we have placed Madison in a position to have an economic renaissance like never before. We have developed a unique approach that is giving Madison a regional recognition that it deserves."

Courtney said as part of the Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority, the city of Madison developed workforce development and destination investment plans that "we believe can create a quarter billion dollars of economic impact to the city of Madison over the next three years." He noted OurSIRDA was one five regions in Indiana to receive the maximum $50 million from the state's Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative (READI) fund. "These investments will be made all across our community for infrastructure, parks, roads, trails, housing, industry investment and tourism initiatives downtown and on the hilltop ... We will further develop Madison into a gateway to Indiana and a regional gem that we already know that it is."

Courtney also praised economic investment by local company SuperATV in Madison with its upcoming expansion plans "growing our community and creating well-paying jobs." He added that "in just a few weeks we will be announcing over $100 million in new investment in housing, retail and industrial development all on the hilltop," he said, thanking SuperATV Owner and President Harold Hunt and his "great team."

As part of the mayor's presentation, there was a video on one of Courtney's key initiatives during the past year — blight elimination — which highlighted the investments by Trevor and Van Crafton, and Judy Koehler in resurrecting blighted properties in Madison.

"We know that eliminating blight has so many benefits to our community," said Courtney.

Courtney also talked about the city's PACE (Preservation and Community Enhancement) program that he said has "spurred historic preservation efforts all across our neighborhoods raising property values by 33%, reducing crime and driving unprecedented investment. We've proven that leading the way with our own financial commitment that we can incentivize new capital investment and produce better outcomes." He noted that in 2021 more investment was created through the PACE program than the previous seven years combined "all without demolishing a single contributing historic structure."

Courtney the commended "all the great work done to grow our tourism industry" that, he said, has brought $41 million into the community. "Just two years ago tourism was on the ropes" during the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, but now "our tourism economy is not just surviving, it's thriving." He said that has resulted in record innkeeper tax collections and much more.

"Madison's tourism is alive and well," he said, "In the new environment, Madison is not just a tourist destination but a destination of a lifetime, bringing new permanent residents to our community and helping fuel our growth."

Courtney noted that the new northern approach that was secured by the city's airport "furthers our airport's capabilities and appeal. Investment at our airport and our port authority are making over a $70 million annual economic impact to the region."

He also spoke on Madison's municipal utility that provides "over 800 million gallons of clean drinking water a year to nearly 80% of Jefferson County" and noted that the city will be making a $13 million investment in clean drinking water supply and distribution systems.

Courtney noted that Madison has more than 280 acres of parks "with endless activities for visitors and residents of our city." He said a new parks master plan is nearing completion that "will upgrade our parks especially our neighborhood playgrounds where our children play. They deserve modern equipment, ADA accessibility and a basketball court that's not deteriorating. We're committed to making that happen."

Courtney also noted that with the help of a $2 million grant, "we're halfway through a historic restoration of the iconic Crystal Beach swimming pool that will make it available for generations to come" and "in the last year we have reduced deficits at Sunrise Golf Course by 54%. We've created new marketing strategies, doubled profit at our city campground, slashed youth and adult sports participation fees by approximately 50% and we adopted new technology platforms that have moved over 20,000 transactions online that had previously been processed manually."

A newly formed public arts commission, Courtney said, is developing a strategy around parks and entertainment because "we recognize the value art has on a community for quality of life and as an economic driver."

Courtney said investments in the Mulberry and Second streets corridor "will include newly designed gathering spaces, parking, housing, a downtown grocery store — all of that will come to fruition."

In an effort to be welcoming, Courtney noted that property has been acquired for a new gateway entrance from the Milton-Madison bridge as well as on the riverfront to "protect our open space corridor."

He said the city is working with the Army Corps of Engineers "to bring much needed solutions to the flash flooding problem we've experienced on the Crooked Creek watershed. We're about four or five months into that year-long process, but that is going to drive our results so we can mitigate the potential impact of any possible flash flooding in that area."

Courtney, a distance runner himself, finished out his State of the City with a quote by American long-distance runner and 1972 Olympian Steve Prefontaine, who died in 1975: "To give anything less than your best is to sacrifice the gift."

"We have abundant gifts here in Madison and abundant gifted people. That's really the key to our success," Courtney said. "We talked a lot about how instrumental investment is to our community, and I believe that 2022 is the dividend year in which we will reap a rich dividend for all the effort that so many people have invested in Madison" noting the city is "a small town with an historic future because Madison is on the move."

Mayor's Eagles, a class of fourth graders from Lydia Middleton Elementary School with Harlan Heitz as its president, led the Pledge of Allegiance to open the event, along with an invocation by Mike White, pastor of 24/7 Life Church.
